City's Housing Study highlights trends and proposed strategies to address affordable housing needs

Supporting the creation and maintenance of affordable housing is among the City's top priorities. An update of the last housing study, completed in 2016, was needed to analyze the current housing market and identify strategies to address housing needs in Virginia Beach, considering the pandemic and other demographic changes that have had a major impact over the last several years.

During the past year, consultants analyzed local and regional data, best practices and input from multiple engagement opportunities, including an online survey, public meetings, expert focus groups and interviews with council members. Read more about the proposed overall strategies for City Council's consideration.
