Military members can try a new career with the City of Virginia Beach through a SkillBridge internship.

As a military-friendly organization that currently employs more than 800 veterans, the City of Virginia Beach recognizes the extraordinary work experience gained during active-duty service. Leadership, teamwork and problem-solving are a few of the sought-after skills veterans have that the City highly values and actively seeks in its workforce.

To help bridge the gap between military service and the civilian career that follows, the City of Virginia Beach participates in an internship program called SkillBridge, which allows eligible service members to get work experience outside the military during their last 180 days of active-duty service.

Military members interested in exploring local government service at the City of Virginia Beach are invited to apply for a SkillBridge internship, which can be for up to 120 days. The most commonly offered positions are within the departments of Human Resources, Information Technology, Engineering, Emergency Management, Police and Fire.
